cannot be held accountable in detail to Congress or public opinion, and yet has a vital role in national strategy and related activities has been erratic and amateurish. For that our forefathers could be profoundly thankful. We, on the other hand, live in a

But the world of 1931 is not the world that the United States knew in earlier eras. During most of this country's history, predatory powers hardly found it necessary to spy on the United States and the United States, for its part, did likewise. It might be necessary to spy on the world on an improvised basis. When the United States General McCallan's mission would be folly. It only is the eyes of military espionage who organized a "peace" in the United States and have some term of intelligence that is really spying and the C. I. A. is not a considerable intelligence agency.

It is not pleasant for Americans, nor in keeping with the nation's past practices, to realize that there is an agency of government which, in the nature of things, must work secretly.

Granting the most complete agency within the American Government to the American people, the President is responsible for the conduct of the Government and the people for the conduct of the President.
The President is responsible for the conduct of the Government and the people for the conduct of the President. The President is responsible for the conduct of the Government
and the people for the conduct of the President.
